FROM THE PRESIDENT

October is an exciting time around the Belt Theater! We're kicking off our 8th Season with the incredible John Roberts y Pan Blanco, and we're already booking our 9th Season for 2027-28. It keeps our volunteer Board on their toes — but we wouldn't have it any other way.

I believe this may be our best season yet, thanks in large part to the loyal support of our sponsors and patrons who keep the Theater a vibrant home for the arts and our Board energized and engaged.

The Theater has gotten considerably busier these past few months. Our Arts and Education Director, Jeff Ross, is actively producing plays with the Young Montana Players, hosting adult play readings, and leading creative writing workshops. No prior experience needed — just show up and jump in!

We are also proud to continue our commitment to area youth. This season, seven of our touring artists will conduct music education outreaches with Belt School students — bringing professional musicians directly to our kids and giving them exciting experiences that go well beyond the standard classroom.

If you have a special event coming up, check out our facility rental options offered at an extremely competitive rate — there's nothing quite like a celebratory evening in the historic Belt Theater.

And if you've never been to a show, I want to personally invite you to come try one. The Belt Theater is small and intimate — exactly the way live music was meant to be experienced. The acoustics are outstanding, the atmosphere is welcoming, and the chance to personally interact with world-class touring artists from across the country and around the globe is something unique and special in rural Montana. Come once and you'll understand why we love this place.

Thank you for your continued support of the arts in Belt.

See you at the Theater!
Jim Olson

Young Montana Players Seeks Youthful Energy

The Young Montana Players to begin weekly workshops for grades 6-12, and younger actors by permission.

Workshops will prepare actors for performing in Not another Midsummer's Dream!, an adaptation of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," a comedy suitable for all ages.

Note: student's participating in workshops are not required to perform in the play.

For younger students to participate and other inquiries, please contact Director Jeff Ross at: jeffross.bpac@gmail.com
